Why not be happy on report card day? This is the book you need to make your child a straight-A student. You will build your child's confidence, help them feel less stress, and ensure that they never struggle at school again. Millions of parents spend sleepless nights worrying about their child's performance at school. They grow anxious at the thought of not seeing them live a successful life, without having a good paying job, a comfortable income and a feeling of happiness and confidence. In When Their Best Is Not Good Enough, Peter Verbansky gives parents the exact information they need to ensure that their child quickly climbs to the top of their class and easily makes the grade, regardless of how well they are performing now and no matter what grade they're in. These tips work and they will work for you. In 15 fast-moving chapters, you'll discover: A radical new approach to turning your child into a super student How to help your child with homework without doing the work for them Insider tips to motivating your child and the mistake most parents make How to see immediate improvement with your child's feelings of self-worth Time management strategies that will leave both of you with enough time for fun Tactics to dealing with any teacher and instantly getting on their good side Tips for dealing with your child's classmates and friends A strategy for learning math and science that absolutely never fails Practical tips to writing better, reading faster and studying smarter Ways to take better notes to remember anything that's important How to study for any test in less time and with less stress How to build a desire for lifelong learning in your child The secret of dealing with a school's administration and bureaucracy The 10 basic, yet powerful steps to academic excellence And much, much more! Don't spend another moment without these time-tested strategies for total scholastic success. Your child only has one opportunity to get it right - give them every advantage possible to quickly make the grade and feel the confidence and pride of being a natural success. Their success depends on you.
